The story of Quo Vadis takes place in the year 63 AD in Rome, during the reign of Emperor Nero. Returning from the war as a hero, Vinicius falls in love with Lygia, who lives by the values of early Christianity. Vinicius asks his uncle Petronius, an influential advisor to Nero, for help in getting the girl. Petronius, a hedonist, is captivated by his beautiful slave, Eunice, who leads him to appreciate spiritual beauty.

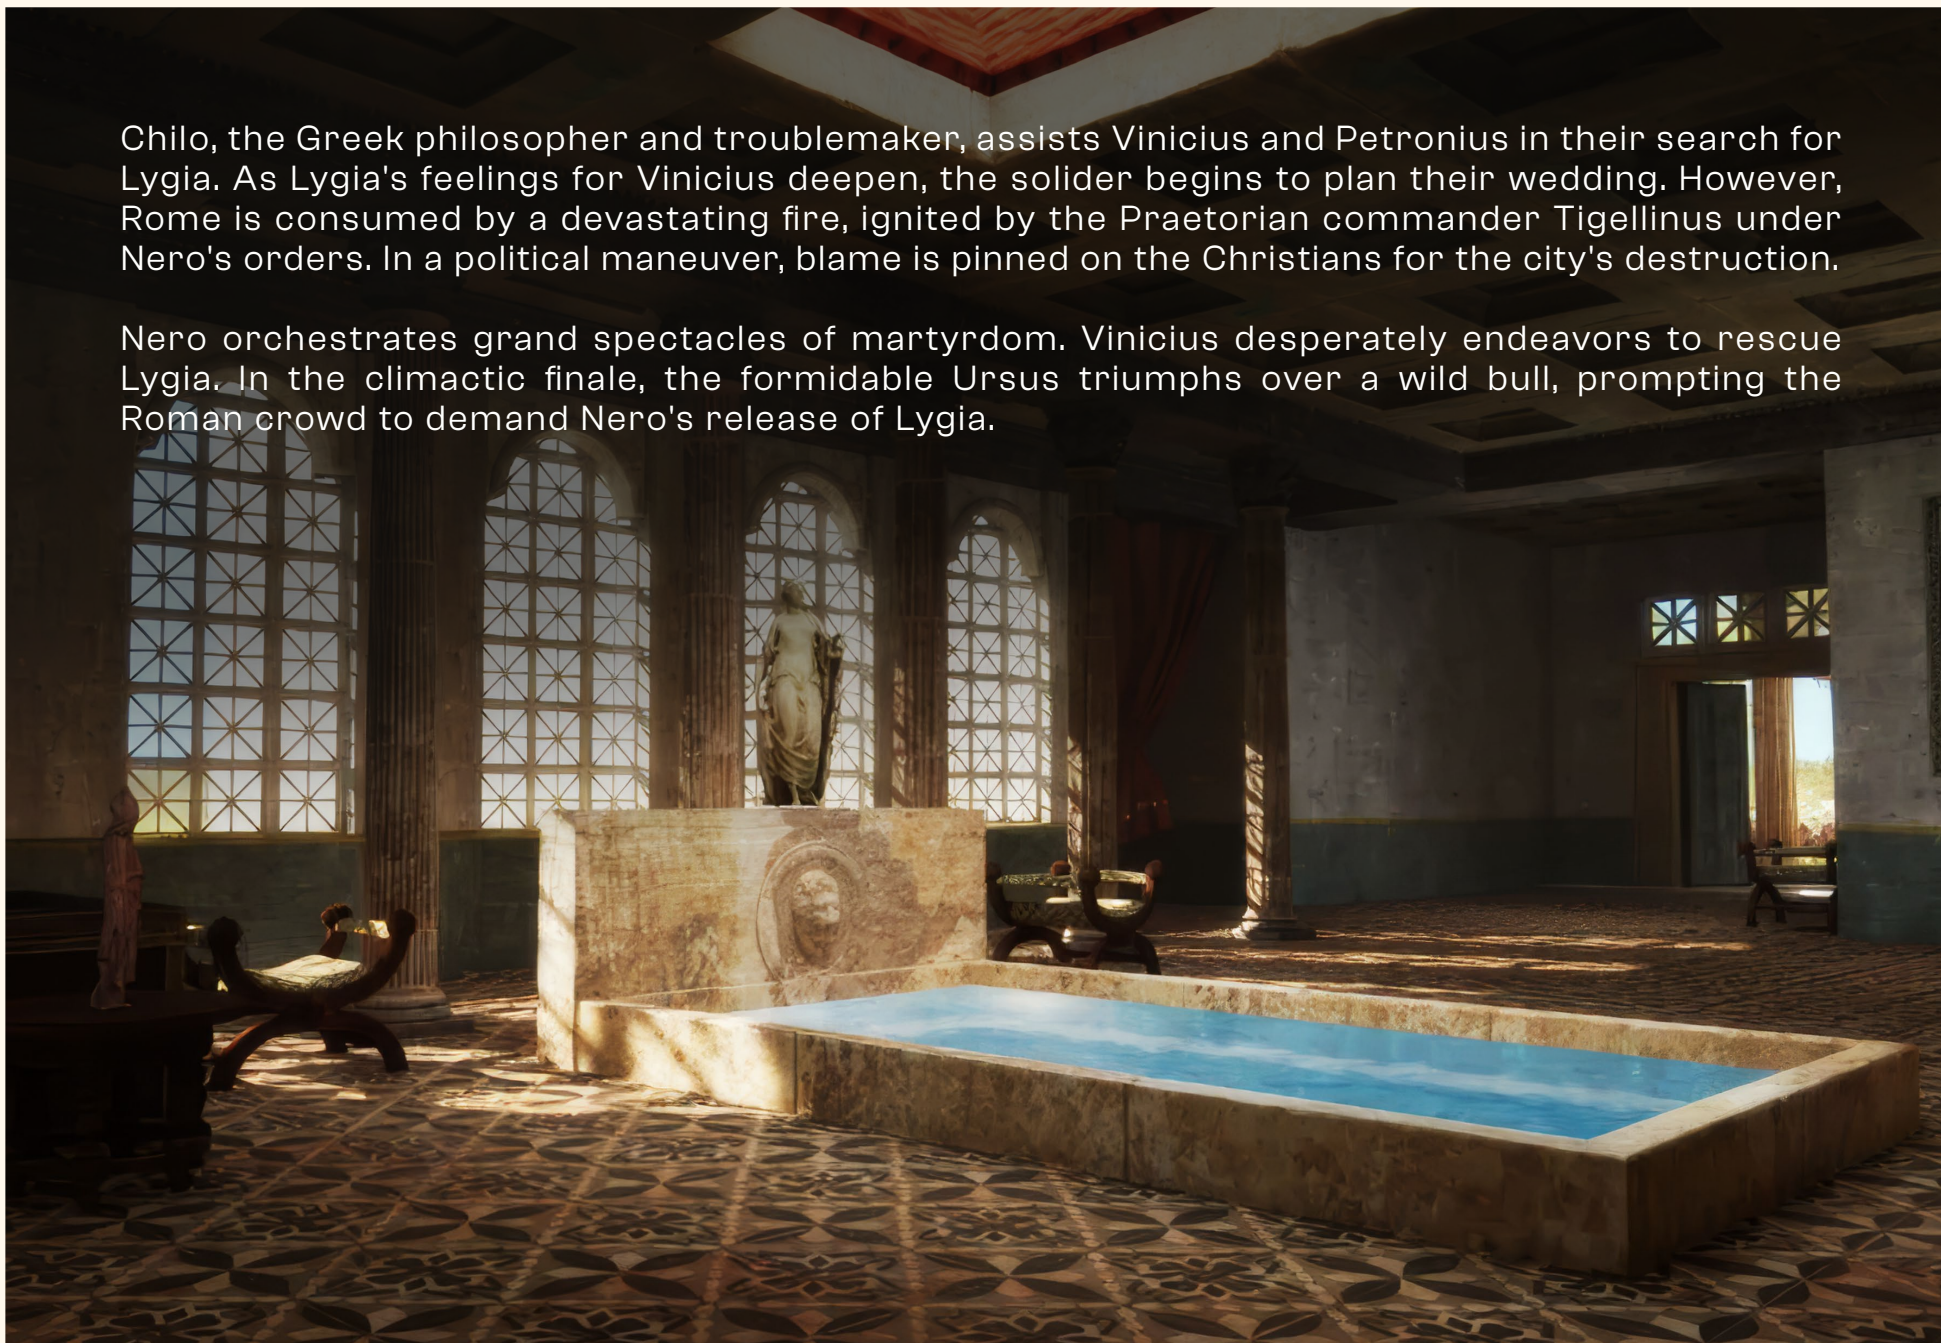

Petronius's scheme leads Nero to order Lygia's presence at court, intending to gift her to Vinicius. However, Lygia escapes with her servant Ursus's aid, finding sanctuary among the Christians.

Chilo, the Greek philosopher and troublemaker, assists Vinicius and Petronius in their search for Lygia. As Lygia's feelings for Vinicius deepen, the soldier begins to plan their wedding. However, Rome is consumed by a devastating fire, ignited by the Praetorian commander Tigellinus under Nero's orders. In a political maneuver, blame is pinned on the Christians for the city's destruction.

Nero orchestrates grand spectacles of martyrdom. Vinicius desperately endeavors to rescue Lygia. In the climactic finale, the formidable Ursus triumphs over a wild bull, prompting the Roman crowd to demand Nero's release of Lygia.
